

Simba and Nala. Romeo and Juliet. Anthony and Cleopatra. Samson and Delilah. Is there one more love story that reconstructs the socially constructed norms of love in this day and age? Is there a tale that is, against all odds. Is there one more that refuses to be shaken, waterwashed or diluted? Dear world - here is one more story that in all essence is not a story at all. Along with this one so distinct love story is another and another.

Couples: Tales of one individual recognising another born of a woman, as not just another, but a significant puzzle piece to complete the puzzle. Be enchanted by the birth of fresh dews of young love and couples celebrating years of holding on. Here are ordinary people consumed by the extra-ordinary mystery of love. Read more...

Engagement and wedding love stories: Suddenly. Suddenly here you were and there I was. Suddenly you were so much more than what I could have ever imagined. Suddenly my dreams came true when I found you. In the certainty of the present and the uncertainty of the future, I love you. Read more...

Family and friends. You can't have your cake and eat it too. You're looking for the perfect wedding filters and...
...the celebration in the sun. And for the boys in the crowd, specifically, you don't want...
...to have a new partner. It's not the same. Allow me to mourn. My world is no...
...other love stories. Something refuse to be confined to a category or name. Read more...
...to you, he's not just a name. He's a man. You'll find his story and his life as an idea...